Hong Kong Adventist Hospital Partners with HKUST to Advance Medical Education

Hong Kong Adventist Hospital (HKAH) is pleased to announce its partnership with The Hong Kong University of Science and Technology (HKUST) to support the establishment of Hong Kong's third medical school. This collaboration marks a significant milestone in local medical education and aligns with HKAH's mission to enhance healthcare standards through innovation and cross-border partnerships.

Key Highlights of the Partnership:

- Clinical Training Opportunities: HKAH will provide clinical rotation opportunities for HKUST students, enriching their educational experience with hands-on training.
- Global Network: Leveraging Adventist Health's extensive global network of hospitals, medical schools, and universities across the United States, Australia, Japan, and Korea, this partnership will enrich teaching quality with clinical instructors from around the world.
- Centres of Excellence: Together, HKAH and HKUST will establish Centres of Excellence for various specialties to support community health and wellness initiatives, embedding a comprehensive and patient-centered ethos into medical training.

Prof. Nancy Ip, President of HKUST, expressed sincere gratitude for the support from HKAH, stating: "These partnership reflects our shared commitment to advancing the future of healthcare in Hong Kong and represents an important leap forward in our journey to establish the city's third medical school. By leveraging advanced clinical facilities, invaluable expertise, and extensive medical networks, we will create unparalleled opportunities for students to engage in immersive clinical training."

Mr. Alex Lan, President and CEO of Hong Kong Adventist Hospital, added: "We are delighted to forge a partnership with HKUST to jointly advance the establishment of Hong Kong's third medical school. This collaboration will combine the strengths of both institutions, supporting the medical school application process through clinical training initiatives. Together, we will harness the extensive resources of Adventist Health to create an international platform for medical education and research exchange, fostering deeper collaboration between academia and the healthcare industry."
